

ISO 45001:2018 Introduction Workshop

Duration:

One day

Objective

This ONE-DAY course is an introduction to the new health & safety standard ISO 45001. It is composed of a series of tutorials covering some of the most significant occupational health and safety management system issues. The course provides individuals with an introduction to:

the general requirements of H&S systems, with specific reference to ISO 45001:2018

risk assessments and evaluation of legislative compliance establishing objectives and monitoring improvements learning from your mistakes.

Contents

Health & safety hazards

Risk assessment and risk controls

Legislation

Improvements

Auditing the OH&S management system

Implementation issues

Who should attend

Anyone who is responsible for managing the Health & Safety within their workplace or is considering implementing a formal Health & Safety Management framework within their work.

Course benefits

Delegates will gain an understanding of the:- requirements and benefits of occupational health and safety management systems different approaches to the implementation of a health and management systems implications of implementing their own management system

Additional information

With further study and training attendees should be able to develop implementation plans for developing the company OH&S management system.

Certificates

All delegates who successfully complete this course will receive a certificate of attendance.

Trainers background

The trainer for this programme has extensive international experience in designing, implementing and auditing various different forms of management systems, including Health & Safety, Environmental, Quality and Risk Management.